Course Description

In session 6, we will start incorporating some of what we already learned into more practice. Consider specific situations that might be temporarily uncomfortable. Remember, discomfort is the frequent companion of progress. Don’t let it stop you. Think back to session 2 when we discussed automatic responses. This session will invite you to face problems challenges head on and to produce thoughtful responses that enable others to take greater responsibility for their own function. This session will help you think more clearly about what my responsibility is and what’s theirs. This is a short session. So we will come back and discuss some good reflection and exercises for you to take with you at the end.

Learning Objectives
At the end of this session you will be able to:

- Cite benefits of careful crafting of “I” Positions
- Describe effective ways to manage reactivity to emotional discomfort
- Identify examples of weak accountability strategies

¹Note that the proper reporting is dependent on the requirements of your state board of accountancy. (These requirements may address fields of study classifications and credit hours recognition.)
